1. Read the text below and answer the questions. (5x8= 40 p.)

Catalhöyük is one of the most important archaeological sites in Türkiye. It is located in central Anatolia and is about 9,000 years old. The site is known for its unusual houses, which were built very close to each other without streets. People entered their homes through the roofs using ladders. Inside the houses, there were wall paintings, decorations, and even places for cooking and sleeping. Archaeologists believe that the people of Catalhöyük lived in a peaceful community and worked together. Today, the site helps scientists understand how early humans lived in large communities.
